1. The following is an examiner's statement of reasons for allowance:

The present invention is directed to a printer of transferring portions of print job to other printers and informing the user where the other printers are located.

Independent claims 1, 29, 32, 68, 71 identify the uniquely distinct features of "prints location information, using insert printing, of said transfer destinations to which the print job is transferred in place of pages that correspond to the portion of the print job that is transferred." The closest prior art, Lobiondo (US 5,287,194) disclosed a similar image forming apparatus transferring portions of print job to transfer destinations; either singularly or in combination with other cited references, fail to anticipate or render the above underlined limitations obvious (to be used with other claimed limitations).

Insert printing is defined as: printing the transfer destination's location information instead of printing the transferred page on the page where the transferred page existed as defined on page 28, paragraph 13, specification.

Independent claims 18, 67, 70, 73, 74 identify the uniquely distinct features of "wherein said printing unit prints a map showing the transfer destinations to which the print job is transferred." The closest prior art, Lobiondo (US 5,287,194) disclosed a similar printer of transferring portions of print job to other printers and informing the user where the other printers are located, either singularly or in combination with other cited references, fail to anticipate the above limitations or render the above limitations obvious to be used with other claimed limitations.

Independent claims 28, 69, 72 identify the uniquely distinct features of "wherein said processor divides the received print job and transfers a portion of the print job obtained as a result of the division; and said printing unit prints location information of said transfer destinations to which the print job is transferred correlatively with the page numbers of the transferred pages." The closest prior art, Lobiondo (US 5,287,194) disclosed a similar printer of transferring portions of print job to other printers and informing the user where the other printers are located, either singularly or in combination with other cited references, fail to anticipate the above limitations or render the above limitations obvious to be used with other claimed limitations.

Independent claims 31, 34 identify the uniquely distinct features of "printing procedure prints the location information of the transfer destinations to which the print job is transferred correlatively with the page numbers of the transferred pages." The closest prior art, Lobiondo (US 5,287,194) disclosed a similar printer of transferring portions of print job to other printers and informing the user where the other printers are located, either singularly or in combination with other cited references, fail to anticipate the above limitations or render the above limitations obvious to be used with other claimed limitations.
